9 dead, 70 trapped as 7.4-magnitude quake rocks Taiwan

PRONE TO EARTHQUAKES

Taiwan is no stranger to powerful earthquakes yet their toll on the island's 23 million residents has been relatively contained thanks to its excellent earthquake preparedness, experts say.

LIES ALONG THE LINE OF SEISMIC FAULTS IN THE PACIFIC 'RING OF FIRE'

WHY SO MANY TEMBLORS?

Taiwan lies along the Pacific 'Ring of Fire,' the line of seismic faults encircling the Pacific Ocean where most of the world's earthquakes occur. The area is particularly vulnerable to temblors due to the tension accumulated from the interactions of two tectonic plates, the Philippine Sea Plate and the Eurasian Plate, which may lead to sudden releases in the form of earthquakes.

HUALIEN (TAIWAN)

THE strongest earthquake in a quarter-century rocked Taiwan during the morning rush hour Wednesday, killing nine people, stranding dozens of workers at quarries and sending some residents scrambling out the windows of damaged buildings.

The 7.4 magnitude quake, which also injured more than 1,000, was centred off the coast of rural, mountainous Hualien County, where some buildings leaned at severe angles, their ground floors crushed. Just over 150 kilometres away in the capital of Taipei, tiles fell from older buildings, and schools evacuated their students to sports fields, equipping them with yellow safety helmets. Some children covered themselves with textbooks to guard against falling objects as aftershocks continued.

Rescuers fanned out in Hualien, looking for people who may were safe, according to the fire agency, but the roads to reach them had been damaged by falling rocks. Six workers were going to be airlifted on Thursday.

In the early hours after the quake, neighbours and rescue workers could be seen on TV lifting residents, including a toddler, through windows and TAIWAN TO HANDLE QUAKES?

HOW WELL-EQUIPPED IS

The island has implemented strict building codes, a worldclass seismological network, and widespread public education campaigns on earthquake safety. The govt continually revises the level of quake resistance required of new and existing buildings which may increase construction costs and offers subsidies to residents willing to check their buildings' quake resistance. It also is pushing quake drills at schools and workplaces onto the street, after doors fused shut in the shaking.

Taiwan is regularly jolted by quakes and its population is among the best prepared for them, but authorities said they had expected a relatively mild earthquake and accordingly did not send out alerts. The eventual temblor was strong enough to scare even people who are used to such shaking.

"I've grown accustomed to (earthquakes). But today was the first time I was scared to tears by an earthquake," said Hsien-hsuen Keng, a resident who lives in a fifth-floor apartment in Taipei. "I was awakened by the earthquake. I had never felt such intense shaking before." At least nine people died in the quake, which struck just before 8am, according to Taiwan's national fire agency. The local United Daily News reported that three were hikers killed in rockslides in Taroko National Park, which is in Hualien, and that a van driver died in the same area when boulders hit the vehicle.

A tsunami warning was triggered but later lifted. Another 1,011 people were injured. The quake and aftershocks also caused 24 landslides and damage to roads.

LIVING WITH EARTHQUAKES

Taiwan and its surrounding waters have registered about 2,000 earthquakes with a magnitude of 4.0 or greater since 1980, and more than 100 earthquakes with a magnitude above 5.5, according to the USGS. The island's worst quake in recent years struck on September 21, 1999, with a magnitude of 7.7. It caused 2,400 deaths, injured around 1,00,000 and destroyed thousands of buildings. The last deadly quake to strike Hualien County occurred in 2018, collapsing a historic hotel and other buildings. 'This high level of seismic activity will unfortunately continue for millions of years to come,' said Stephen Gao, a seismologist and professor at Missouri University of Science and Technology.

Bodies of six slain foreign aid workers leave Gaza

RAFAH (GAZA STRIP)

THE bodies of six foreign aid workers killed in Israeli airstrikes began the journey back to their home countries Wednesday as they were transported out of the Gaza Strip and into Egypt, Egyptian state television reported.

The deadly strikes have renewed criticism of Israel's conduct in the nearly 6-monthold war with Hamas and highlighted the perilous conditions aid workers face in trying to deliver food to the besieged enclave, where experts say nearly a third of the population is on the brink of starvation.

The three British citizens, a Polish citizen, an Australian and a Canadian American dual citizen worked for World Central Kitchen, an international charity founded by celebrity chef José Andrés. Their Palestinian driver was also killed, and his remains were handed over to his family for burial in Gaza. The other bodies were driven into Egypt through the Rafah crossing. The seven were distributing food that had been brought into Gaza through a newly established maritime corridor when Israeli airstrikes targeted their three vehicles late Monday, killing everyone inside.

Israel said it carried out the strikes by mistake and that it has launched an investigation.

Some of Israel's closest allies, including the United States, condemned the deaths, which led the World Central Kitchen and other charities to suspend food deliveries, citing the dire security situation.

Israel faces growing isolation as international criticism of its Gaza assault has mounted. North Gaza is on the verge of famine, experts warned.
